Judge Day is a student of the Southern problem, political and social, and a very entertaining talker. He is a Southerner by hirth, and served in the Control rate army. He said to a reporter for The Times last night:

"People in the South are some of them feeling prosperous, but not all. The tempor aty relative prosperity depends largely on location. The toleacon raisons of the South are fairly happy this winter. The wheat and corn takers are even better off generally. The cotton farmers are poor. The price of cotton is low. But me season's cooks only a temperary affair. The Southern fatmer, as long as he is consultated as he is at present, will never to really propercur. I will be censured butterly for it at bonne, but it is true nevertheless, that he is cursed with laxiness. His laxiness will always keep'him back, always prevent as attaining to any large success. I don't want to go tack to the question of race or heredity in this matter, but the environment of the taising of cotton has cone much to make him what he is in this way. "Cotton is the easiest crop to mise in the world. The farmer plants in March. In July be has finished cultivating. The picking takes a month or so lateron. During all this time nobody does may work on the roo on rulny days. Taking these out, the bole crop takes up not more than five noutle of work. The rest of the year the cotton farmer is idle. Met. R. R. S. 19 The market had several variations of tone after the opening, and during the carry part of the day it was sustained by the anticipations of a favorable Su-preme Court decision, but when it was learned that the decision had been again postponed there was a general disposition to reslize profits on the recent advance. Sugar and Manhattan were the conscious features, their movements reflecting mania-

The dealings here were on too small a scale to have any effect on the market. The market closed rather weak, being unfavorably affected by the declines in Sugar

The statement of the Burlington road : expected today, and the universal belief that it will be an excellent one. One stor out that is generally given credence is that the gross earnings will show an increase of $800,000.
